

Call for Applications: SWGS 201 TA Position (Graduate Students Only)

CSWGS solicits applications for a graduate student teaching assistant position in spring 2023 for SWGS 201 "Introduction to the LGBT Studies" to be offered by the CSWGS Postdoctoral Fellow Tesla Cariani.

Assistant teaching in an introductory course helps build a teaching record for those who wish to apply for academic positions in women, gender, and sexuality studies programs and departments, or for positions that might be affiliated with these programs and departments. This assistantship offers first-hand teaching experience, familiarity with the debates and issues taken up in an introductory course, as well as a chance to discuss syllabus design and assignments.

Duties include attendance at all classes, some grading, office hours to assist students with assignments, and occasional course lectures. Remuneration is $3,500. This opportunity is designed to prepare graduate students to be instructors of record; special consideration will be given to applicants who are also willing to commit to serve as instructor of record for SWGS 201 for spring 2024.

Applications are due by email to riedelbs@rice.edu at 5pm on Monday, November 28, 2022. They should include a CV and cover letter with a description of qualifications, including relevant courses taken, research or other projects related to the topic of the course, and the name of one Rice faculty reference.

Finalists for the position will be interviewed beginning December 1, 2022.
